Who it is for

For people who may be first on scene in a demanding environment, such as close protection operatives, security teams and event responders.

What it typically covers

- Scene safety, primary survey and patient assessment
- Catastrophic bleeding control
- Airway management and basic airway adjuncts
- Resuscitation with an AED
- Trauma care, including fractures and spinal injuries
- Medical emergencies, recording findings and handover to clinicians

Content follows the standard UK course of this type. Exact syllabus and assessment are confirmed when you book.

Good to know

- Small groups, with up to 12 learners per instructor, and up to 6 on FREC courses.
- FREC courses need at least two weeks' notice to register with the awarding body.
- Courses can be arranged for teams, households and organisations.
